Fill in the gaps

| Suzanne (1) you down to her place near the | ne He sank beneath your wisdom like a stone       |

| river                                      | And you want to (6) with him                      |
| You can hear the boats go by               | You want to travel blind                          |
| You can spend the night beside her         | And you know he will find you                     |
| And you know, she's half crazy             | For he's touched your perfect body (7) his mind   |
| It's why you want to be there              | Suzanne takes your hand now                       |
| She feeds you tea and oranges              | And she leads you to the river                    |
| That come all the way from China           | She is wearing rags and feathers                  |
| And (2) when you mean to tell her          | From Salvation Army counters                      |
| You have no love to give her               | And the sun pours down like honey                 |
| She gets you on her wavelength             | On our, our lady of the harbor                    |
| And she lets the (3) answer                | She shows you where to look                       |
| You've always been her lover               | Among the garbage and the flowers                 |
| And you want to travel (4) her             | There are heroes in the seaweed                   |
| And you want to travel blind               | There are children in the morning                 |
| And know she will trust you                | They are leaning out for love                     |
| For you've touched her (5) body with yo    | ur And they will lean that way forever            |
| mind                                       | While Suzanne holds the mirror                    |
| Jesus was a sailor                         | And you want to (8) with her                      |
| When He walked upon the water              | You want to travel blind                          |
| And He spent a long time watching          | And you know she'll find you                      |
| From His lonely wooden tower               | For she's touched your perfect body with her mind |
| And when He knew for certain               |   |
| Only drowning men could see Him            |   |
| He said,"All men will be sailors then      |   |
| Until the sea shall free them"             |   |
| But He, Himself was broken                 |   |
| Long before the sky would open             |   |
| Forsaken, almost human                     |   |
