| You get a shiver in the dark                                 | Saving it up for Friday night                   |
|--|---|
| It's raining in the park, but meantime                       | With the Sultans                                |
| South of the river you (1) and you hold everything           | We're the Sultans of Swing                      |
| A band is blowing dixie double four time                     | Then a crowd of young boys, they're fooling     |
| You feel alright when you (2) that music ring                | (4) in the corner                               |
| Well now you step inside but you don't see too many faces    | Drunk and (5) in their best brown baggies       |
| Coming in out of the rain to hear the jazz go down           | and (6) platform soles                          |
| Competition in other places                                  | They don't give a (7) about any trumpet playing |
| Ah but the horns, they blowin' that sound                    | band  |
| Way on down south  | It ain't what they call (8) and roll            |
| Way on down south, London town                               | Then the Sultans                                |
| Check out Guitar George, he knows all the chords             | Yeah, the Sultans they played creole            |
| Mind he's strictly rhythm, he doesn't want to make it cry or | Creole  |
| sing   | And (9) the man, he steps right up to the       |
| Yes and an old guitar is all he can afford                   | microphone                                      |
| When he gets up under the (3) to play his                    | And says at last (10) as the time bell rings    |
| thing  | Goodnight, now it's time to go home             |
| And Harry doesn't mind if he doesn't make the scene          | Then he makes it fast with one more thing       |
| He's got a daytime job, he's doing alright                   | We are the Sultans                              |
| He can play the honky tonk like anything                     | We are the Sultans of Swing                     |
